On-Demand Home Services in Kathmandu

Research Scope: Kathmandu, Nepal

1. Introduction

The growth of on-demand home services in Nepal has created a rising need for skilled workers who can deliver quality services directly at the customer's doorstep. To meet this demand, a wide network of training providers has emerged across the Kathmandu district, offering hands-on courses in areas ranging from technical repairs and construction work to beauty, wellness, and domestic care.

This report maps and analyzes the training providers identified in the Kathmandu district for 40 service categories relevant to the on-demand home services sector. The findings are drawn from primary research and publicly available information gathered from training institution websites, online platforms, and service provider portals.

2. Scope of the Study

This study covers 40 service categories that are commonly listed under on-demand home service platforms in Nepal. For each service category, training providers were identified based in or accessible from the Kathmandu district, along with key details such as provider type, website, and whether training is offered on a paid or free or subsidized basis.

The data for this report was gathered through desktop research conducted in June 2026. Training providers were identified by searching for institutions offering courses or programs relevant to the selected service categories. All information was verified using official institutional websites to ensure accuracy and reliability.

Only providers with a verifiable online presence and clearly relevant training programs were included in the dataset. Institutions without sufficient or confirmable information were excluded and marked as Not Found.

The classification of training providers was based on two main criteria:

- Organizational type
- Fee structure

3. Training Providers Dataset

The following table presents the complete dataset of training providers identified for each service category. The heatmap after the table provides a visual overview of which institutions cover which services, allowing a quick comparison of provider portfolios across all 40 categories.

The heatmap below confirms that a small group of institutions, including Apex Skills Academy, NMSPL, UTIOC, Trade Link Technical Training Institute, and Skill Nepal, cover the widest range of services. Most other providers are specialized, covering only two to four service areas. This concentration of broad-coverage providers means that losing any one of these key institutions would significantly reduce training availability across several categories simultaneously.

4. Key Findings

4.1 Overall Training Landscape

A total of 215 training provider listings were recorded across the 40 service categories, representing 55 unique training providers. Many institutes offer training across multiple service areas. The chart below shows how provider coverage is distributed across all service categories, making it easy to spot which areas are well served and which are underrepresented.

Electrical Repair leads with 14 providers, followed closely by Plumbing Repair with 13 and AC Services with 10. These three categories reflect strong market demand for technical services in urban households. On the other end, Chimney Repair, Tree Cutting and Pruning, and Lift and Elevator Repair each have only a single identified provider, pointing to clear gaps in the training landscape.

4.2 Distribution by Provider Type

The identified providers span several organizational categories. Training institutes form the largest segment, followed by training providers, training centers, and online platforms. The distinction between a training institute and a training provider is primarily operational: institutes tend to offer structured curricula with certification, while providers are often industry practitioners who offer practical, skill-focused programs.

Table 2: Distribution of Training Providers by Organizational Type

No.	Provider Type	Count
1	Training Institute	127
2	Training Provider	61
3	Training Center	19
4	Online Platform	7

Training institutes account for most listings, reflecting a preference for structured, certification-backed learning pathways in the Kathmandu market. Online platforms remain the smallest segment, suggesting that digital vocational training has not yet gained significant traction for home service skills in Nepal.

4.3 Free and Subsidized Training Availability

Free or subsidized training options were identified for 31 entries across multiple service categories. These programs are primarily offered by government-affiliated or semi-government institutions such as NMSPL, UTIOC, F-Skill Nepal, ISET Nepal, and Talim Kendra. The pie chart below shows the overall split between paid and free training across all 215 listings.

Share of Paid vs Free or Subsidized Training

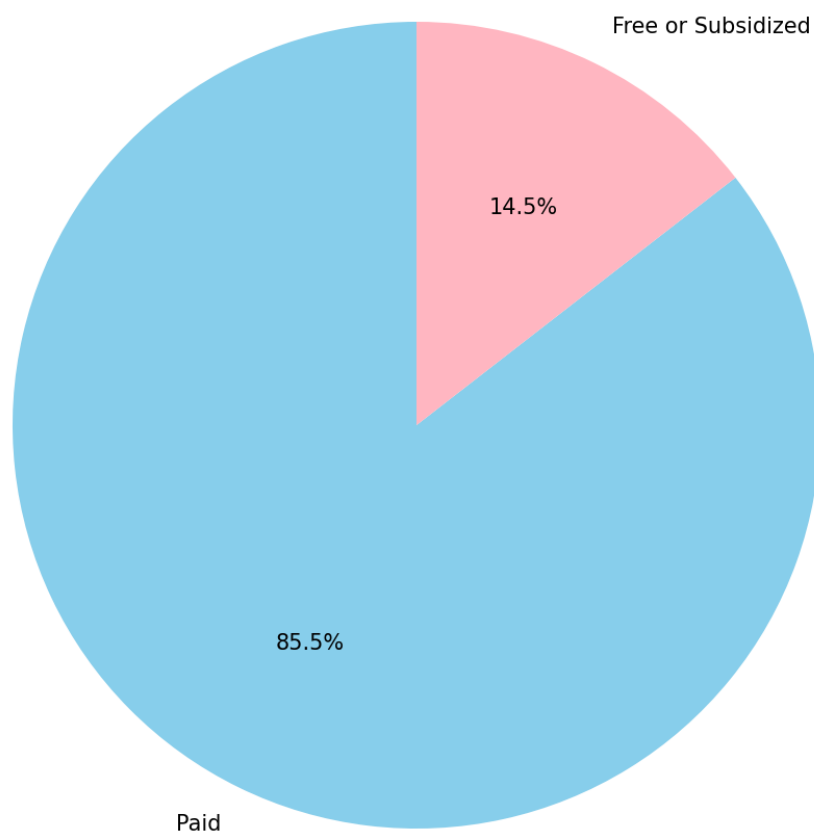

Figure 4: Share of Paid vs Free or Subsidized Training

As seen in the above chart, 85.5 percent of all training listings are paid, while 14.5 percent are free or subsidized. This reflects the dominance of the private training market. However, the stacked chart below goes deeper, showing exactly which service categories have free options available alongside paid ones.

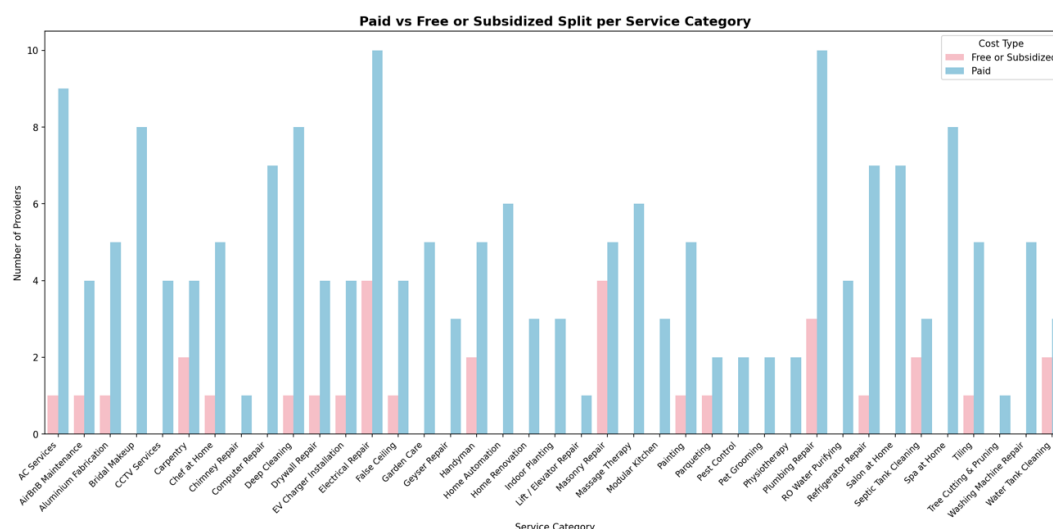

Figure 5: Paid vs Free or Subsidized Split per Service Category

Masonry Repair and Electrical Repair have the highest number of free or subsidized options, each offering four such programs. Services like Bridal Makeup, Salon at Home, and Chef at Home have no free training pathways at all, meaning aspiring workers in these categories must rely entirely on paid courses. This imbalance is worth addressing for platforms looking to recruit talent from lower-income backgrounds.

4.4 Most Active Training Providers

Several training providers appeared repeatedly across multiple service categories, indicating a broad and diversified training portfolio. The table and chart below list the top 10 most active providers based on the number of service categories for which they offer training.

Table 3: Top 10 Training Providers by Number of Service Categories Covered

No.	Institution Name	No. of Services Covered
1	Apex Skills Academy	12
2	NMSPL	11
3	Trade Link Technical Training Institute	11
4	UTIOC	11
5	Global Reliance TC	10
6	Skill Nepal	10
7	Mobile Training Institute	9
8	Kamkhya OVS	7
9	KIEC	7
10	Technical Sewa	7

Apex Skills Academy, Trade Link Technical Training Institute, NMSPL, Skill Nepal, and UTIOC are the most versatile providers, offering training across a wide range of technical and vocational services, making them key contributors to workforce development in the home services sector.

4.5 Service Categories with Limited Training Options

Although most service categories have multiple training providers, several areas remain underdeveloped, as shown in the chart of the ten categories with the fewest providers.

Packing and Moving has no identified training provider. Chimney Repair, Tree Cutting and Pruning, and Lift and Elevator Repair each have only one provider. Pet Grooming and Physiotherapy also have very limited options despite increasing demand, indicating clear gaps in training infrastructure.

5. Conclusion

The Kathmandu district has a reasonably developed training ecosystem for on-demand home services, with over 55 unique providers covering most service categories. Technical trades such as electrical repair, plumbing, masonry, and AC servicing enjoy the widest training coverage, while niche and emerging categories such as pet grooming, chimney repair, and lift maintenance are underserved.

The dominance of paid training reflects the commercial nature of the sector, but the presence of free or subsidized options through institutions like NMSPL, UTIOOC, Talim Kendra, and F-Skill Nepal ensures that access to skill development is not entirely limited to those who can afford private tuition. Strengthening these free pathways and expanding coverage into underserved categories should be a priority for anyone building a talent pipeline for home service platforms in Nepal.
